Press Release

TRUSTNET OFFERS PRIVATE INVESTORS THE INSIDE TRACK ON STRUCTURED PRODUCTS IN UK FIRST

Trustnet, the leading free and independent fund research and analysis website, has added a brand new section on structured products, becoming the first UK investor website to offer such coverage and detail on these products. The new section, which until now was only available to financial advisers, offers private investors a comprehensive snapshot of the current structured products market.

Key features include tables that highlight when new products hit the UK market or when they are nearing the end of their offer period; a sortable A-Z database of all current structured products and structured product providers, with full contact details, and an optional email alert service to notify investors of new product releases and upcoming closures.

The section also includes an industry-leading education guide and a dedicated structured products news channel.

Paul Wynne, head of communications for Financial Express says: "We are finding that more and more Trustnet readers are learning to successfully diversify their portfolios, and as a result they want to consider alternative asset classes. By encouraging investors to educate themselves about structured products, and explore the market, we are endeavouring to help them increase their confidence in and understanding of these sophisticated products. As a complement to the new structured products section, Trustnet also offers investors a search facility to find a suitable, qualified financial adviser."

Investors can view the structured products section at www.trustnet.com/sp.
